Over the past 20 years we've (my family) given to various ministries, supported children and indiginous missionaries through Christian Aid, Compassion, etc. But, you don't neccisarily know how the money is used, is the missionary your supporting truly a believer, are they opossed to the message of faith, etc., other than being led and trusting in the Lord.
But where do you guys give? Are their ministries out their that believe closer to what we do, etc.?

this will give insight into how they use their money - but as far as the beliefs side - i think that largely would be relationally based - meaning you know someone in the organization or the character of someone for whom you might be able to specify funding.

I'm not attending a church right now so my main giving goes to Jews For Jesus. I strongly agree with their ministry to Jewish people and they go through a lot of persecution. If you ever have a chance to go to one of their presentations at easter/passover then go. Its quite interesting.
