Subject: to join or visit a denominational church?
Posted by David Coleman on Tue, 14 Oct 2025 17:33:37 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Though I didn't at first know that the church I was in was not Spirit filled as they led us to believe, but was really all I knew at the time. It takes knowledge to understand what was really going on.

People can be friendly and make you feel at home. You will live on baby food forever though. I had a burning in my bones and was baptized in the Holy Spirit. The desire was to live total for Jesus and was really experiencing him. Miracles followed me. I was there for a reason. One was God gave me a wife.

One day God sent a man to get me into the more excellent ways of truth. It started with HEF ministry. After talking to the pastor I was close to about faith, the church went way down hill. He rejected what I said.

The point I am making is God may use you to visit but not join a church. Make sure you hear him correctly. There may be someone for you to deliver or save.