What a good computer bible program.

Did you know---it's free. There are some books you can buy to add. The best ones are free.

Here's a description of what's on mine.

KJV bible it is also with the numbers for when your in Heb. or Greek. You put your mouse on it and the scripture comes there.

Thayers is the best Greek dictionary and the bdb is the best Heb. dictionary They are free.

Keil and Delitzh are 129:00 dollars a set JFB is 30-40 dollars these are best commentaries---free.

RWP Robertson's is best Greek interpreter vines is good to.

Spurgeons Psalms great devotional.

Barnes notes it is O.T. and N.T. 500-1,000 dollars for that free Websters dictionary and others to.

Naves and torrey are two good topical studies books.

and Much more.-----check it out and God bless.

Good post but in the wrong spot. Perhaps someone can move it as I'm not sure how.

you put the lime in the coconut...

Look beside 'Moderator options'...

You just click on 'move' and a box will appear with the options ...

this seems the logical place, unless you think maybe the Library??

Just wanted to give a testimony about E-sword.

Told a fellow at work and he is excited about getting his free software program. One thing that came to mind is the possibilities that are available here. One being that as I share the word with him, he will already have reference materials that can be used to lead him into a special way to bible study on a regular basis.

How does this work?

by giving him certain scriptures and already pre-read comments of any reference, can share things with him. He then can go home and get into them. Looking into giving him papers which will have lookup scriptures. He will always be welcome to share anything with me. Love to be asked questions and then show people how to find answers.

My daughter goes to UAB to learn a occupation in foreign relations. She is trying to decide whether to go as missionary or a CNN representative. either way it gets her there to share her talents over seas. My prayers are that she will find the will of God for her life and be in a position of fruitfulness. She at this point wants to be a active Christian. Most important that she finds God's will as not all service is profitable. God predestinates, my desire is she is a chosen one for a good high purpose.
