One of your children may leave home and get married. I have two. They are married. Would like to tell about that tree briefly.

The son married a divorced woman. from that came two girls he adopted. Plus they went to Korea and adopted a son. One of two girls married and gave us two great grand children. a boy and a girl.

the daughter married and gave us one girl and three boys. She divorced and married and only received his two daughters. This troubled marriage has given us the chance to help in raising one boy. He spends a weekend with one or the other first parents.

The benefit is raising a half sweet and half untrained boy. The results are tremendous. He is my cross to put self to death. He helps me to have patience. He is a great preparation for training the people in which need to grow in Christ. I am always reminded that I was a child once. Also what my parents had to go through.

God is at work and he seems interested in the bible and even made a cross out of ice cream stick. I am looking at him in a positive way and that is a good thing.
