
Subject: OFF THE BENCH...INTO THE GAME

Posted by james on Wed, 14 May 2008 01:45:58 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I just spent the last couple hours looking at the info on the 130 registered members of this site. What I saw was a majority of the members regularly logged in to read the postings by other, but never had anything to say themselves. Now there's not anything wrong with that per say, except we could all benefit from what each other has to share or add to the topics under discussion. Don't be intimidated by the more eloquent members, just because one person's more gifted with the use of words than others or can quote scripture locations better than you is not an excuse for not becoming involved. Matt.5:14-16 Let your light shine. We need each other to grow, to examine our positions on biblical views, bounce our ideology off each other, encourage one another, share what God had done and IS doing in our lives. So forgive the analogy of sports to try to get your attention...if it bothers you, help is available, God does allow for humor. SO JOIN IN, brothers and sisters,I think you'll be surprised and maybe even start healing some of those areas in our lives that need healing and restoring. FELLOWSHIP...IT'S A GOOD THING !!

Subject: Re: OFF THE BENCH...INTO THE GAME

Posted by Yeshuafollower on Wed, 28 May 2008 23:22:52 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I agree....and being that I am new...not really going to care if someone thinks I should just sit and be quiet. I am definitely not PC and I try to be BC as much as possible.

Shalom,
Michelle
