

---

Subject: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by grandom on Mon, 16 Aug 2010 12:57:23 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

How often have we heard that little phrase and really not payed particular attention to its meaning.

I was thoroughly blessed by my heavenly Father this morning. I went out to feed the birds and as I was exiting the house I saw a little sparrow on my bottom step that appeared to be hurt. I suppose this will seem strange to most but I started talking to the bird asking if he was hurt etc. I stopped for a few seconds (to smell the roses) so to speak. I felt impressed to pray for this little sparrow. I put two of my fingers on it's head I asked that it be healed in Jesus name. Healthy wild birds do not allow this to happen I went on to the feeder and fed the other birds and as I was coming back into the house this little bird raised it's head looked at me a flew into the tree.

Luke 12:6 says Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? God had not forgotten this little bird. As I started out the day today My prayer was that I would be able to minister God's love and mercy today to at least one person. Little did I know that God would bless and encourage me in this little birds plight.

If God will heal a little sparrow how could I ever doubt He will heal me.

God is so faithful.

Be blessed in Jesus name.

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by james on Mon, 16 Aug 2010 16:05:35 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Brother I've had almost the same experience, a Cardinal flew into my sliding glass door once, and appeared to be dying, and I held it and prayed for it and soon it flew away. He does care about them, how much more so does He care about us?

God uses many different ways to teach us, remind us, and encourage us of His love for us (as well as all His creation).

Many times the simplest examples are the most profound...

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

---

grandom wrote on Mon, 16 August 2010 07:57 How often have we heard that little phrase and really not payed particular attention to its meaning.

I was thoroughly blessed by my heavenly Father this morning. I went out to feed the birds and as I was exiting the house I saw a little sparrow on my bottom step that appeared to be hurt. I suppose this will seem strange to most but I started talking to the bird asking if he was hurt etc. I stopped for a few seconds (to smell the roses) so to speak. I felt impressed to pray for this little sparrow. I put two of my fingers on it's head I asked that it be healed in Jesus name. Healthy wild birds do not allow this to happen I went on to the feeder and fed the other birds and as I was coming back into the house this little bird raised it's head looked at me and flew into the tree.

Luke 12:6 says Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? God had not forgotten this little bird. As I started out the day today My prayer was that I would be able to minister God's love and mercy today to at least one person. Little did I know that God would bless and encourage me in this little birds plight.

If God will heal a little sparrow how could I ever doubt He will heal me.

God is so faithful.

I've honestly tried to live with this attitude for quite some time now. And as I read Grandom's post this morning about "Uplifting Things To Do Today", one said, "Thank God for His beautiful creation". I love nature and animals and enjoy interacting with them when possible, always have.

Anyway, my testimony today centers around all the above and the quote from Grandom: "If God will heal a little sparrow how could I ever doubt He will heal me." Yesterday as I walked I stopped to pet a neighborhood cat, one that I'd petted often before. She was happily rubbing against me and enjoying me until one of her kittens came out of the bushes and she must have thought that I then presented a danger, so she bite me on my forearm. So naturally I was given advice by well meaning folks, "you'd better go get a rabies shot"... "did you know that cats have more harmful bacteria in their mouths than all other pets?"..."you know that infection will set in even if it doesn't have rabies"..."better get that looked at"<smile> My God PROMISED that NO weapon formed against me would prosper, and He said nothing about that by an injection of drugs would I be healed...He said, "By HIS STRIPES I am HEALED."

So today I give God thanks for His beautiful creation and His faithfulness to heal and deliver me EVERY time. No, it's not infected, red, or swollen; it's HEALED...Thank You, Jesus. We are more precious to Him than a sparrow, and He watches over them. Amen, stop and smell the roses...or more specific, stop and give God thanks and praise, for ALL His MANY blessings.(of which healing is just one, there's so many more.)

I don't take for granted what Jesus HAS DONE for me, in fact it is very humbling, again I say Thanks. I desire and confess to live a life of praise and continually be thankful...every day.

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by sparkles on Fri, 22 Oct 2010 20:24:19 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Praise the Lord James for your testimony. God is certainly faithful to us in all areas of our lives. We have seen Him faithful in deliverance, healing, finances, mental, emotional, spiritual, family salvation and about any other area you can think of. When we look at God's word and just take it for what it says there are tremendous blessings in store for us.

One thing we are hearing more and more is the fear people have. The first thing people said to you James was to minister fear with the various negative confessions of what could happen unless you went to a doctor. Little did they know you went to the best physician there is: Jesus.

I'd also like to give a good report on my friend who we prayed for a few weeks ago. She was able to go to Israel and is doing very well. The strength she lost is coming back and she is able to drive again. Praise God!

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by grandom on Fri, 22 Oct 2010 23:43:40 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

James 5:16 says "confess your faults one to another and pray for one another."

For the past five months I have been going through a very serious trial with my lungs. It got to the point I could not carry on a conversation on the phone or really go out much in public because of the constant cough. I was not able to sleep in a bed because of congestion building up so that I had difficulty breathing. Needless to say I have been not getting more than a couple hours sleep a night. Then about a month ago I was also stricken with the flu. Long story short, I gave up on the Lord and sought medical science.

As James said in a recent post when your down and cant breathe etc. Then things happen that only the person going through it can know. Yes I could have kept confessing, yes I could have hung on until the end be it death or healing. I chose not to.

I ask that you don't discount my recent posts on faith and healing. As I go back and read them, they were from the Holy Spirit trying to warn me. Especially is it faith or desire. I tried very hard not to put any personal thoughts into my posts but only scripture.

I havent a shadow of a doubt that God heals. His word is true and no matter how many fail or don't believe it does not change. His word is true.

1Cor 10:12 says" Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth TAKE HEED lest he fall. How many times has James posted on taking heed?" I was convinced no way would I fall and I did. So I say Take heed as James has said so many times.

I have to disagree with Brother Rons post on divine healing. God DOES allow sicknes.I agree sickness is from the devil but God does allow it. It may seem strange due to the fact that I failed the test, but had not God allowed it I would never have know I didn't have true faith. And isnt that what trials are for. God knows how we will respond but He has to show us so we can correct it.

I have been blessed by all the testimonies of divine healing and will continue to be. I don't remember any admissions of failure. I firmly believe that the Holy Spirit wants this message to be heard. God is a loving and gracious God and He says in His word if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive.Maybe others have had other failures but if I am the only one then that's okay also. Just learn from my mistake and take heed.

It would have been very hypocritical of me to keep posting and not admit my fault. The last thing that I want is to be a hypocrite. I want others to learn and be vigilant. I am encouraged that the Lord loved me enough to show me my lack of faith and to give me a chance to repent and start anew. The time is short so He will have to do a quick work in me. I ask that you not judge me harshly but be encouraged and be strong.

In Christs Love.

Grandom

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.
Posted by JWBTI on Sat, 23 Oct 2010 01:04:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Amen !

Thank you Brother,

I agree with your disagreement, but most people do not see it the way you did. Most use it as a reason to turn away from God, not to draw closer to Him as you have !

You didn't fail the Test, you passed it with flying colors !

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by james on Sat, 23 Oct 2010 01:10:12 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

grandom wrote on Fri, 22 October 2010 18:43

James 5:16 says "confess your faults one to another and pray for one another."

It may seem strange due to the fact that I failed the test, but had not God allowed it I would never have known I didn't have true faith. And isn't that what trials are for. God knows how we will respond but He has to show us so we can correct it.

I have been blessed by all the testimonies of divine healing and will continue to be. I don't remember any admissions of failure. I firmly believe that the Holy Spirit wants this message to be heard. God is a loving and gracious God and He says in His word if we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive. Maybe others have had other failures but if I am the only one then that's okay also. Just learn from my mistake and take heed.

I ask that you not judge me harshly but be encouraged and be strong.

Grandom,

First of all I'd like to say that it takes courage to confess something in a format that the whole world can read, and I appreciate your honesty and desire to share this experience with us. I had planned to watch a sporting event through streaming video on the internet tonight, but The Holy Spirit has made a change in those plans. There'll be no harsh judgment from me brother, I've been there before.

I know for sure that I've given my testimony on here 'somewhere' several times( can't seem to find it right at the moment, don't know why I only have about 750 posts to try to recall which ones <smile>) I know I just shared it with a sister in Australia recently, but I'm going to go over part of it again now just so you know you're not alone in 'ever' missing God.

In 2006 I moved to Tampa, Florida to live out my dream of retiring near the ocean and wonderful warm weather year around. I had several things come at me all at once, like the realization that Florida in 2006 wasn't the Florida of the 1960's(immigration) and there was something going on in the world of finance(I was going to be semi-retired and work with a friend in the mortgage business), this was before Bush would admit that we were in a major recession(Florida has really been hit and the Tampa area lead the way, especially housing industry<mortgages>)

After being there a month or so I started losing weight (from 188 to 156) in just weeks. I couldn't eat and experienced severe pains, couldn't sleep or do much of anything except worry.(and I mean major anxiety attacks, I thought I was losing my mind, I would feel things I'd never felt before, mentally) I ended up going to medical science, and not having medical insurance it cost me thousands of dollars...and they couldn't find anything after running tests and giving me various medicines. (This is after having trusted God for healing for 25 years and having seen Him heal me of everything that came against me in that time...not even an asprin for 25 years) NO EXCUSE, I just allowed myself to be influenced by people that was giving me bad spiritual advice, people that had once preached and lived te faith message, that I respected spiritually.

Anyway, I realized I was WAY outside of God's will and knew that the only way out of the mess I was in was to REPENT. I did, and packed my belongings and moved back to Birmingham, Al. Once I repented and started walking in obedience, The Lord manifested my healing, restored my mental health, gave me peace like I have never know, and even made up the financial losses I'd had.

So I'd have to say that I do believe that God will chasten us when we need it, it shows His love for us and for this correction experience I'm grateful...Did I have to deal with condemnation? Yes, I did... what The Holy Spirit taught me was that my walk with Him had become more of a endurance, tough everything out, pride thing(example: 'I haven't been to doctors in 25 years'...I, I, I, not Jesus, Jesus, Jesus.)

I still miss the mark and sin, there are times when The Holy Spirit gives me words to write on this forum that I've not walked in perfectly myself; Satan tries to convince me that I'm a hypocrite...Satan is a liar.

God's Word tells me that His mercies are new EVERY morning...that Great is His faithfulness.
Lamentations 3:23

Paul wrote this and I believe it's Godly advice...

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before,

I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil.3:13-14

amen

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by GWB on Sat, 23 Oct 2010 12:28:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I have been so blessed catching up on all of the recent posts.

I praise His name so much today. One of my older sisters, who confesses Jesus is Lord, was in a bad car accident yesterday morning. Someone pulled out in front of her. She is in the hospital with a couple of broken ribs and bruised badly. Even her hands are bruised. I am thankful for her life and that this is all that happened to her.

The other people were ejected from their car. We don't know if they were killed or not.

As far as the testimonies...."Anyone having put his hand to the plow and looks back is not worthy of the Kingdom of heaven."

RESTORATION...NO CONDEMNATION! May we all keep marching on as we walk in His grace and mercy.

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by sparkles on Mon, 25 Oct 2010 00:36:49 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Greeting Grandom! Thank you for sharing. I can guarantee you that there are areas we have all missed it in. Failure does not always have to be in just the area of healing, but can be in many areas in ones life. One area I have a struggle with is being frustrated with my elderly mother. She has gotten a little forgetful and is never wrong(in her opinion) so if I try to say something to help her she gets mad and says a variety of mean things. Well, I don't always manifest the love of Christ, but rather have given into the flesh at times. I am certainly working on overcoming in this area, but haven't always arrived but it has gotten better, praise the Lord.

We aren't here to judge you harshly, we aren't going to judge you at all. We are here to encourage and pray for each other, and be a blessing. I am very blessed by what you share and hope you will continue to do so. Don't let the devil condemn you so you don't share anymore, because we need you and the words the Lord gives you to share with us.

Are you feeling better now? Or is there still a need to pray?

Please let us know so we can pray also if you so desire.

It is of the Lords love for us that He shows areas we need to change and see our faith grow.

Praise the Lord for your humble attitude, it is going to be a blessing to see all the things the Lord shows and does in you. Lord bless you!

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by grandom on Tue, 26 Oct 2010 09:40:55 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Thanks to all for your encouragement and support. It means a lot to me. I'm feeling much better, however not completely out of the woods yet so if you want to say a prayer or two it would be appreciated.

More later.

Blessings

---

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by grandom on Thu, 28 Oct 2010 14:06:37 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

In view of my recent experiences I thought I would post this devotional by David Wilkerson.

PUTTING LIMITS ON GOD'S POWER AND PROMISES

by David Wilkerson | October 27, 2010

Scripture says of Israel, "Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel" (Psalm 78:41). Israel turned away from God in unbelief. And likewise, I believe we limit God today with our doubts and unbelief.

We trust God in most areas of our lives, but our faith always has boundaries and limits. We have at least one small area that we block off where we don't really believe God is going to undertake for us.

For example, many readers have prayed for the healing of my wife Gwen. But often, when it comes to healing for their own husband, wife, son or daughter, they limit God. I limit God most in the area of healing. I have prayed for physical healing for many, and I have seen God perform miracle after miracle. But when it comes to my own body, I limit God. I am afraid to let him be God to me. I douse myself with medicine or run to a doctor before I ever pray for myself. I'm not saying it's wrong to go to the doctor. But sometimes I fit the description of those who "sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians" (2 Chronicles 16:12).

I ask you: Do you pray for God to bring down walls in China or Cuba—but when it comes to the salvation of your own family, you don't have an ounce of faith? You think, "God must not want to do this. My loved one is such a tough case. God doesn't seem to be hearing me in this matter."

If this be true, you are not seeing him as God. You are ignorant of his ways. God's desire is to "do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us" (Ephesians 3:20).

God told me, "David, you've tied my hands; you've shackled me. How can I heal you when you don't really believe I will? Your doubt hinders me from being God to you. I tell you, you don't know me unless you know that I am more willing to give than you are to receive."

Israel murmured continually, "Can God? Sure, he made a way for us through the Red Sea, but can he give bread?" God gave them bread. In fact, he spread a table for them in the wilderness. "But can he give us water?" they asked. He gave them water from a rock. "But can he give meat?" He gave them meat from the sky. "But can he deliver us from our enemies?" Time after time, God provided and delivered in every area. Yet, the people spent forty years saying, "Can God? Can God?"

Beloved, we ought to be saying, "God can! God can! He did—and he will! God can and will do all that we ask and believe him to do!"

---

Subject: Re: Stop and smell the roses.

Posted by Mark L on Sun, 31 Oct 2010 14:48:20 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

It takes a lot of courage to stand up and admit you missed it. I remember years ago someone saying to me "I'd rather die than go to the doctor" Later I realized why the statement bothered me. The message of the bible is not we don't go to doctors

It's we trust Jesus. Big difference. I have wondered of late how many of us really have what it takes concerning faith. Its so easy to have faith for healing when you're 25 yrs old. Most of us now are older. Do we really have what it takes? A serious trial like this really locates it.

I am encouraged that the Lord loved me enough to show me my lack of faith and to give me a chance to repent and start anew.

Do I ever agree with that. I think we are now in the "time that the bridegroom has delayed his coming" The sun is still shining. We all still live in places where we are able to pursue our faith. In other words there is still time. Faith is not hard to get. It just takes time. The point being that there is still some available. Time that is.

I've spent the last several yrs really working at the faith issue. The Lord spoke to me about it very strongly and then set a goal in front of me. It has really been on my mind lately the prophesy that HEF had a long time ago. It went something like this.

Whatever you're doing in your life make sure you get faith because in the time of the swelling of the jordan it won't affect you. It was longer than that but I don't remember the rest. His point was that when serious natural disasters/serious political upheaval/serious epidemic famine war etc. come it won't affect me/you. Nor will it affect those who I can believe for (family).

No one who has real faith in their heart and has gone through some trials would ever criticize someone who missed it. I think that all of us reading grandoms post should take serious heed to it.

The Lord bless you grandom.

---