I don't know if the search bar has been disconnected or it just no longer works. I tried to search for a subject and it gives me an error page that this page no longer exists.

I am trying to find any information concerning the logos/rhema error. If I remember correctly you had to receive a rhema in order to believe the logos.

If any body remembers any pertinent information concerning this doctrine it would be much appreciated. When I google this information most of the articles supported it.

Anyway tried to search it out on this board and came up blank.

In Him,
Gary

Okay found a teaching by HF: faith or presumption, listening to it now. I still miss our meetings.

Every now and again I attempt to get the search link to work and so far I've come up short... I need a little more wisdom from God!

Anyway, yes, the charismatics a few decades ago came up with the logos/rhema error which essentially said that you needed a special revelation (rhema) before you could exercise faith in the actual word (logos) of God. I still hear preachers use the terminology, unfortunately.

Blessings,
William

Is that a tape you found Gary? Or did you find it online somewhere? I wouldn't mind listening to it.
