I've removed the test area and the maillist associated with it and since nobody liked my innovative initiative I've removed it as a public option. I of course will still be able to leap over tall buildings using the software (designed for superheros) while the masses will still need to use the subway system. Never fear, I will only use my power for good.

I should have realized that most were not ready for change, but I must press on... new challenges call for new solutions... and that my friends is change we all can believe in!

<grin>
